

New volunteer roles offer new

If you're interested in making new friends, learning new skills and helping others, volunteering in your library could be for you.

Anyone can volunteer - a commitment of just two hours a week is the only requirement.

The new flexible roles, which are available in every Staffordshire Library, can support you to explore interests and passions through a menu of different activities.

No two days will be the same, and you could help hundreds of people a year. You could be helping children to read and older people to get online one day and visiting housebound people the next.

If you're thinking about a second career or career change then the new 'Volunteering Speaks Volumes' accreditation programme is for you. In return for your help you can earn formal qualifications in Customer Service, IT, Retail and more for free.

Find out more about volunteering at your local library from the people already doing it at www.staffordshire.gov.uk/volunteerinyourlibrary or contact us for a chat by emailing volunteerinyourlibrary@staffordshire.gov.uk or ringing 01785 278311.

There's no commitment to formally apply - just get in touch for a chat.
